

SOMETHING SPECIAL

ADAM

She's seen me at my best
She's seen me at my worst
She's seen me through the times I could have sworn that I'd been cursed

I put her to the test
I always push my luck
I give her every reason to say enough's enough

But there's something deep inside of her I know I can't explain
Some magic spell that bombshell thinks we've all got just the same

She's something special, such a mystery to me
She's something special, like the waves in the sea
She's something special
She's the way you always wished that things once were
And I've always thought of her as something special

There's people on the street
She could have any one of them
I guess I must be luckier than all those other men

But I don't know what it is
She thinks she sees in me
It's something hidden in a place that only she can see

Because the thought of wondering why she's here throws logic out the door
But rationale ain't what keeps me coming back for more

She's something special, like the Fourth of July
She's something special, she's the morning sunrise
She's something special
She's the one that you've never got, the one you'd prefer
And I've always thought of her as

Someone you always can confide in Someone to share all your dreams with Someone who knows what it takes Cause she's got all the traits you've been looking for

She's something special, like the clouds up in the sky
She's something special, you can see it in her eyes
She's something special
She's the one that you've never got, the one you'd prefer
And I've always thought of her as something special
